After a five-page preface, this volume presents expositions of the various parts of Wisdom 1–6 under the following headings: the incompatibility between wisdom and impiety (Wis 1:1–12); the deadly reasoning of the impious (1:13–2:24); paradoxical human circumstances (3:1–12); the surprising comparison between sterility and fecundity (3:13–4:6); early death and the maturity of the wise (4:7–20); the total reversal of roles (5:1–23); and God’s judgment and wisdom (6:1–21). The authors, who teach at various Roman theological faculties, give special attention to the anthropological, theological, christological, and eschatological dimensions of the text.
