According to T., the Psalms are a condensation of the whole Bible, the soul of the economy of salvation, and provide a “great school of prayer.” T. chooses 16 psalms, representative of various genres and situations (Psalms 8, 13, 15, 19, 23, 42–43, 51, 57, 84, 90, 103, 107, 121, 122, 136, and 139) as exemplifications of the above claims. In each case, he presents the given psalm’s literary structure, offers an exegetical commentary, and concludes with suggestions for praying the psalm.—L.A.T.
